

The Secret of the Strength

What Would the Anabaptists Tell This Generation?

Peter Hoover

Elmendorf Books

Mountain Lake, Minnesota

Rocky Cape, Tasmania

2008

Freedom from Copyright

The text of this book, in line with the ethics it teaches, is in the public domain. It may be copied, quoted, and reproduced in any way—in its entirety or in part. Only, if portions of it get edited or revised, they should no longer be published under the author's name.

Photo Credits

Unless specified, photos are original or in public domain and not copyrighted. Some of the following however, are copyrighted and their use is gratefully acknowledged:

The photo on page 36 was taken by Roland Zuberbühler, on page 49 by Günther Schiller, on page 100 by Robert Ottohall, on page 133 by Hansrüedi Vögele, on page 212 by Wolfgang Schäfer, on page 231 by Alfred Müller and on page 264 by Hans Kern of Eggiwil. Thank you, friends, for your kind help!

Translations

All translations in this book are original. For readability and to fit them into a book this size, all of them have been abridged. To read the full text in German, follow the references indicated.

Previous Editions

This book, written in 1991, has been published informally and appeared on-line since 1998. Benchmark Press of Shippensburg, Pennsylvania, first printed it in larger amounts. In 2006 Down to Earth Verlag in Berlin, Germany, published it in German under the title Feuertaufe. Spanish and Portuguese translations are available from the addresses below.

Contents

1	A Man Hanging from his Thumb	1
2	What Was the Secret of the Strength?	4
3	The Woman Who Had a Baby in Jail	11
4	From Where did the Anabaptists Come?	15
5	Literarily . . . An Explosion	23
6	On to Jesus	30
7	On to Conviction	47
8	On to the Teachings of Christ	74
9	On to the Word	82
10	On to a New Life	96
11	On to Baptism	105
12	On to the Covenant	119
13	On to Communion	132
14	On to Community	144
15	On to Visible Order	168
16	On with the Message	181
17	On to Witness	187
18	On to Peace	200
19	On to an Ethical Way of Life	211
20	On to Modesty	212
21	On to Christian Families	219
22	On to Christian Service	228
23	In Spite of Terrible Mistakes	234
24	A Bull in the China Shop	249
25	To Those of the Church Community	266
26	To the “Outsiders”	272
27	The Last Chapter	281

Acknowledgements

My birthplace, the city of Kitchener, Ontario, had much to do with the writing of this book. Founded by Mennonite bishop Benjamin Eby in the early 1800s, the city, with its doors always open to immigrants, provided me with my first contacts with the wider Anabaptist community: the Russian Mennonites, the Nazarener, the Hutterites, and others. Special recognition must be given to J. Winfield Fretz and Frank Epp, then of Conrad Grebel College, for spending time with me in my most impressionable years. The same and more must be said for Reinhold Konrath, then of Victoria Street, with his rare collection of Anabaptist books and documents, and for Reg Good, a friend.

My parents, Anson and Sarah Hoover, and great-uncle Menno Sauder of the Old Order Mennonite community north of the city greatly stimulated my desire to know about our past. So did my grandparents, Menno and Leah Hoover and our neighbourhood harness-maker, Matthias Martin, whom I visited innumerable times on foot, cutting across the back fields to his place along the creek.

Along with them I thank Amos B. Hoover (in whose library I paged through original Anabaptist writings for the first time), David Bercot, Philip Yoder, Elmo Stoll, John D. Martin, Edsel Burdge and many others for helping me write this book.

For more copies and other works of a similar nature write to:

Elmendorf Books
42668, 600th Avenue
Mountain Lake, Minnesota, USA, 56159

or

Island Books
19509 Bass Highway
Detention River, Tasmania, Australia, 7321
rockycapecommunity@gmail.com